Anti-Super Retrieval and Containment

Section 6...no questions please

Created by special order 221a of the government oversight council on Supers (GOCS) and under the legendary Section-6 department (Classified), ARC, or the Anti-Super Retrieval & Containment division, is a highly classified unit of trained military personnel designed to meet and manage the growing threat of Supers in United States. To this end they use classified leading-edge weapons and equipment and even recruit Supers into their ranks. Seized Supers are placed into what is commonly referred to as the Vault where they are either reeducated and released into ARC's service or contained indefinitely.

ARC consists of at least five fully equipped teams each more than capable of being dispatched to handle warranted Supers, or, such as in the SDS incident in Oakland, working together to take down multiple Supers. Led by the secretive and mysterious General

"Always nice to have friends in your pocket. Even when they don't realize they're being used. Still, he's going to benefit, so who cares."

-General Matthew Davenport

Davenport, the organization is rapidly making a name for itself in policing the local California state of rogue Supers.

It should be noted that once ARC has contained a Super, they lose all personal rights as under article 15 of the Government Oversight Council on Supers (GOCS). As such, extreme cases of reeducation do include torture and death of personality, though this isn't public knowledge.

ARC has two powerful technologies currently available to them, one is the Super Nullifier, a device that puts out a field that scrambles the neural cortex of a Super making it so that their non-physical powers won't function, ie energy attacks, flight, regeneration, etc; this doesn't affect enhanced strength and abilities from superior training or ability. It also doesn't seem to have any effect on entities that are supernatural in origin, such as one mission against a demonic entity proved.

The other technology are their suits of power armor, making their specialist a match for brick & EB classed Supers.

The ARC 'Vault' facility is currently located in San Diego.
